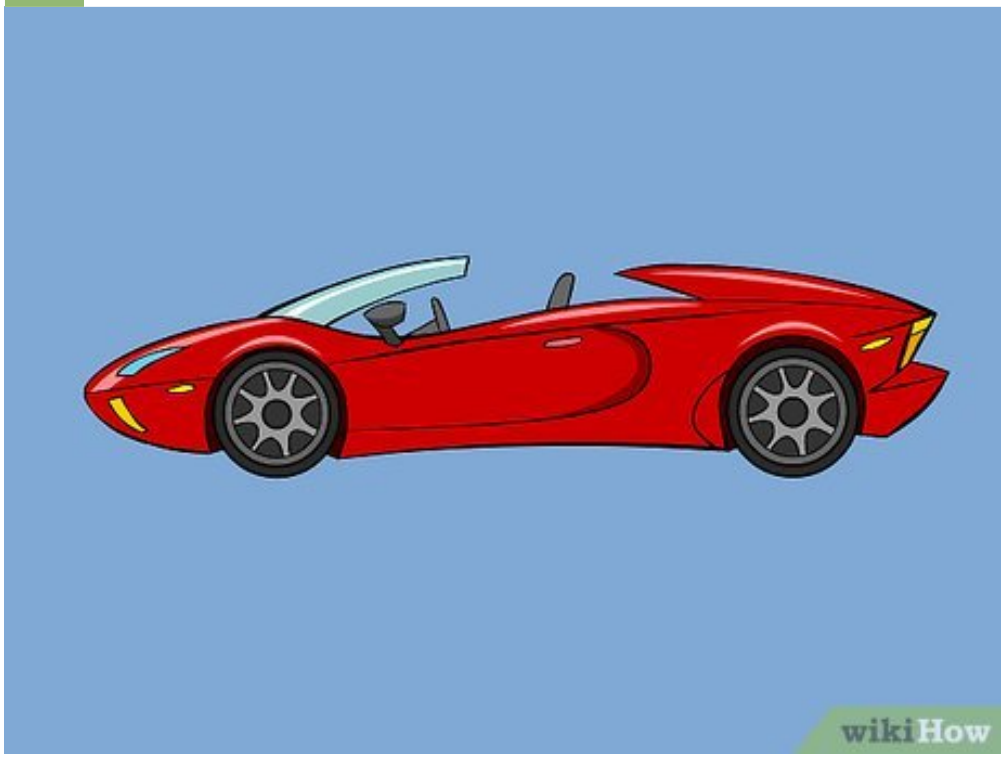
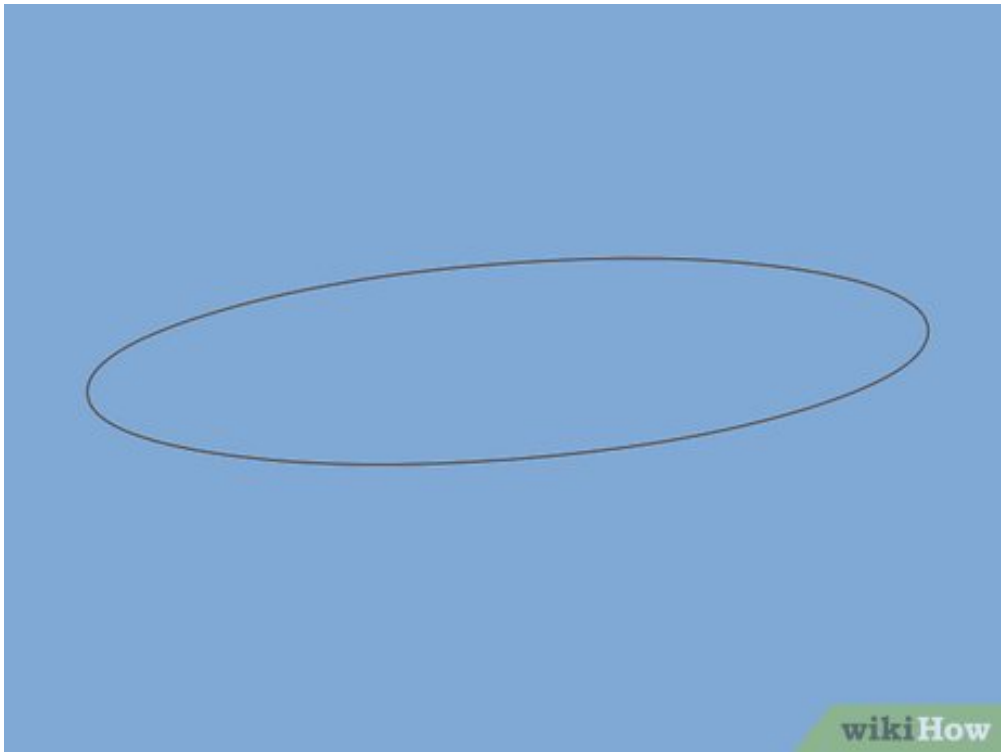
Method 1

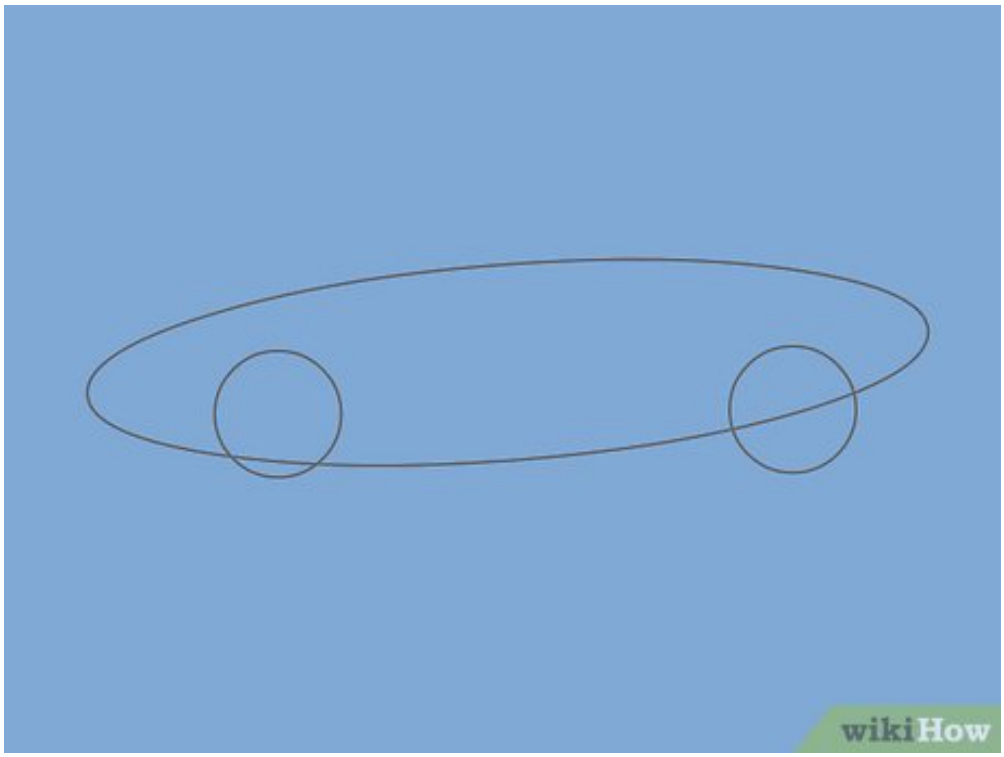
Method 1 of 4: Starting with an Oval



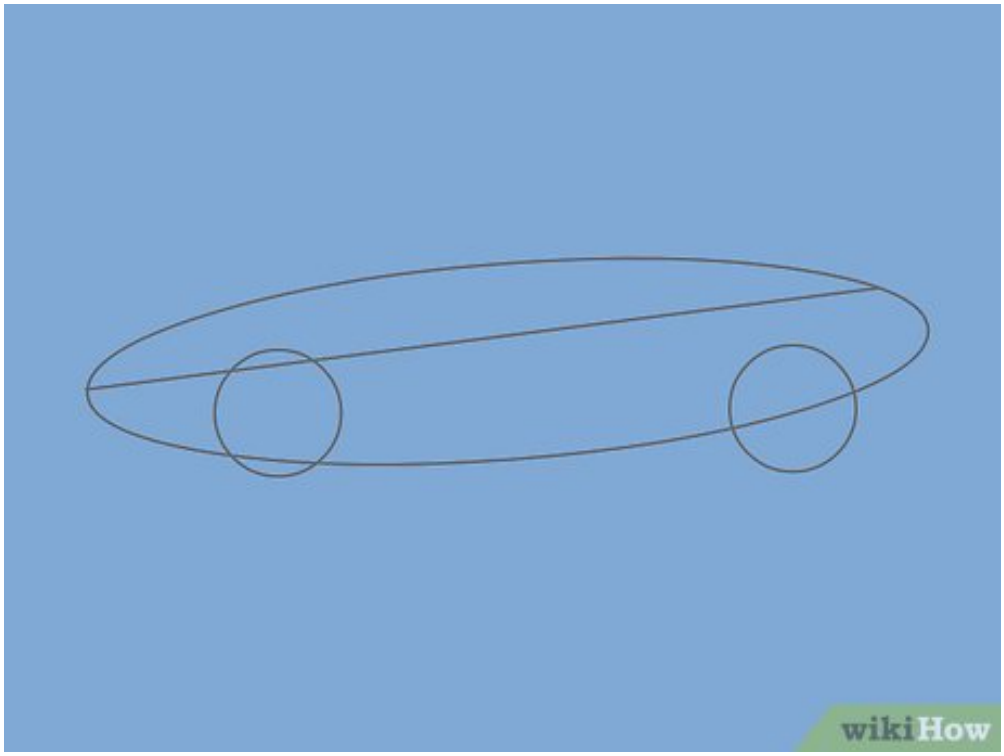
1 Sample oval method.



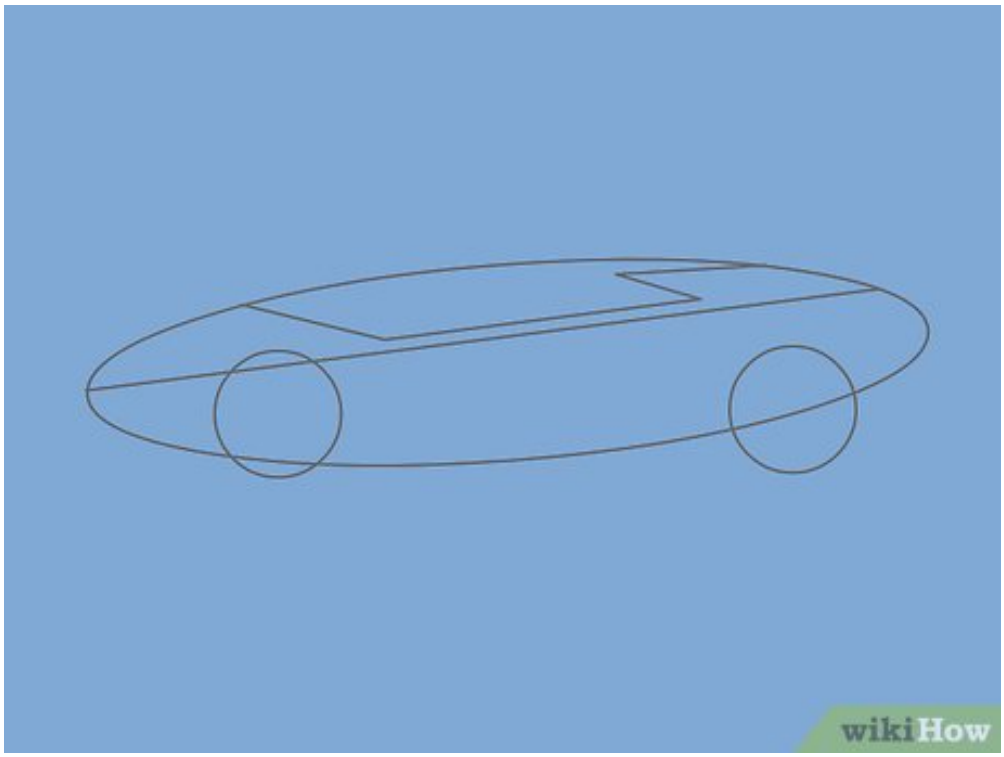
2 Create an angular horizontal oval.



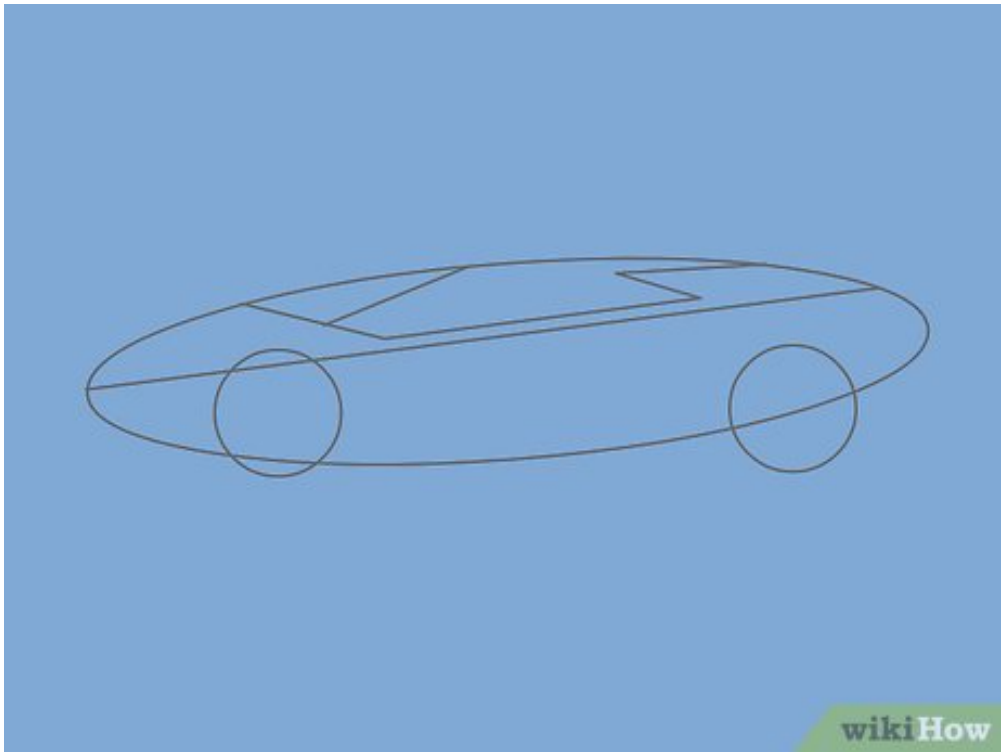
3 Place two similar-sized circles for the wheels of the car overlapping the base-line of the oval.



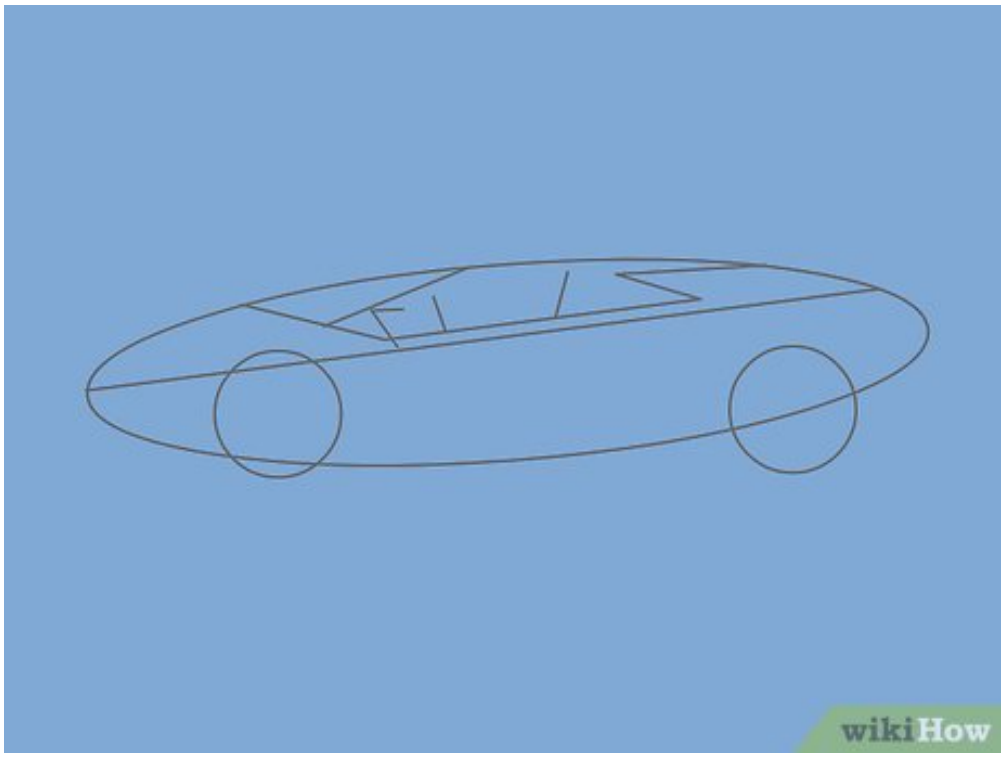
4 Make a straight angular line joining the left and right extremes of the oval.



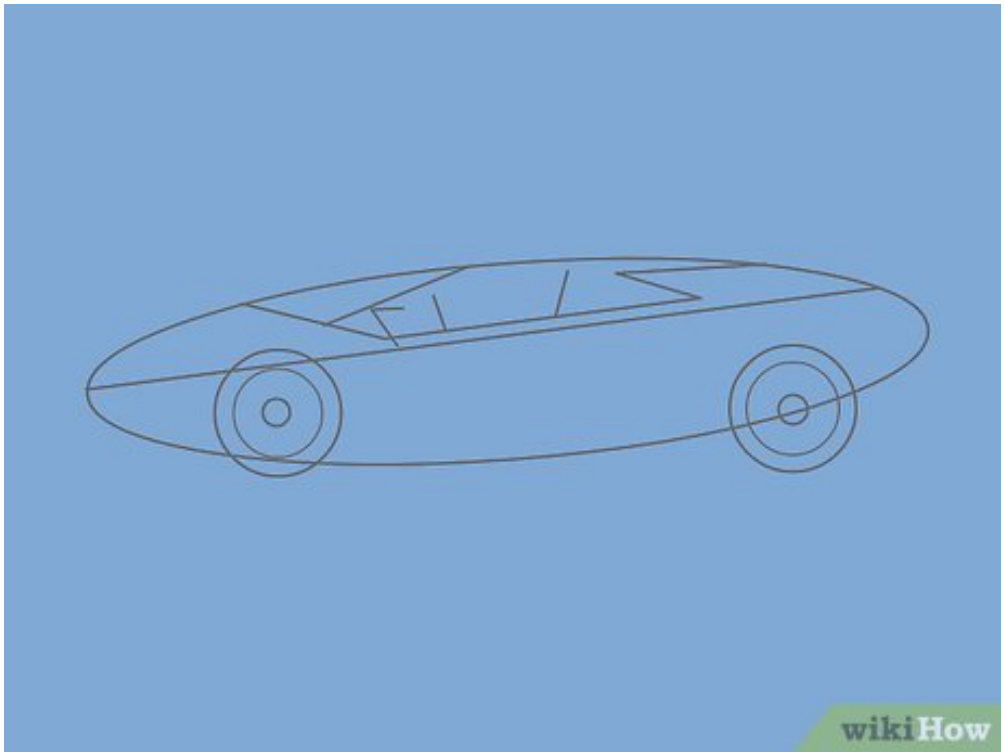
5 Draw straight angular lines connected to each other as shown.



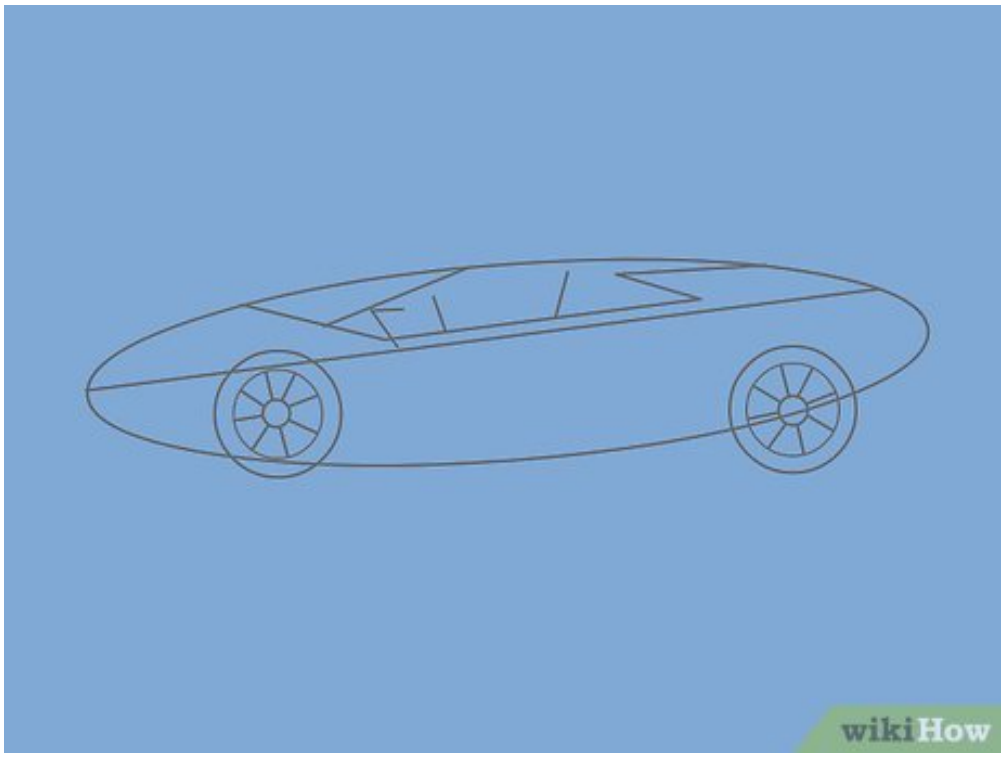
6 Join a short angular line from the base at the left to the edge on the roof.



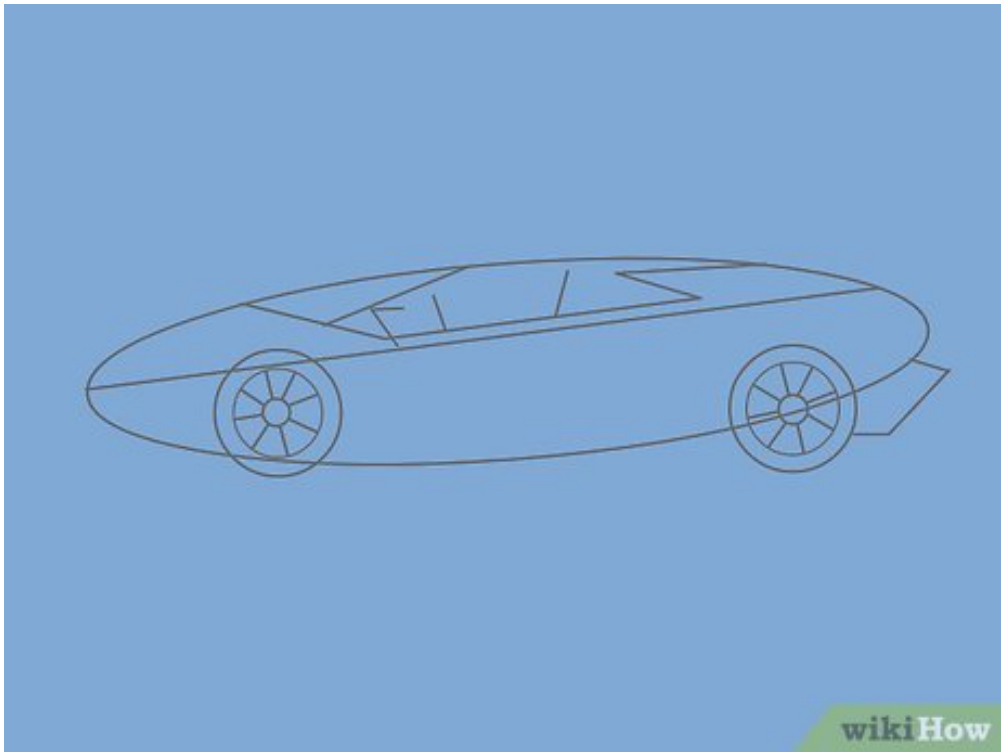
7 Create short straight lines for the guides to the seats and the rear-view mirror.



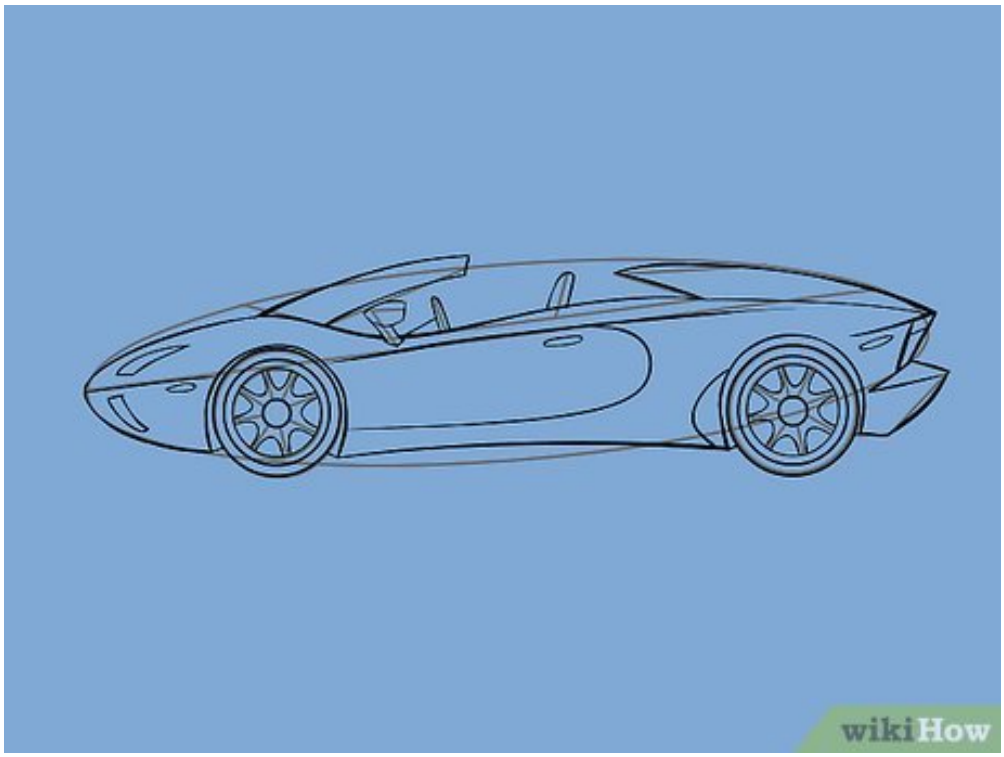
8 Come down to the wheels and draw further circles within the outline.



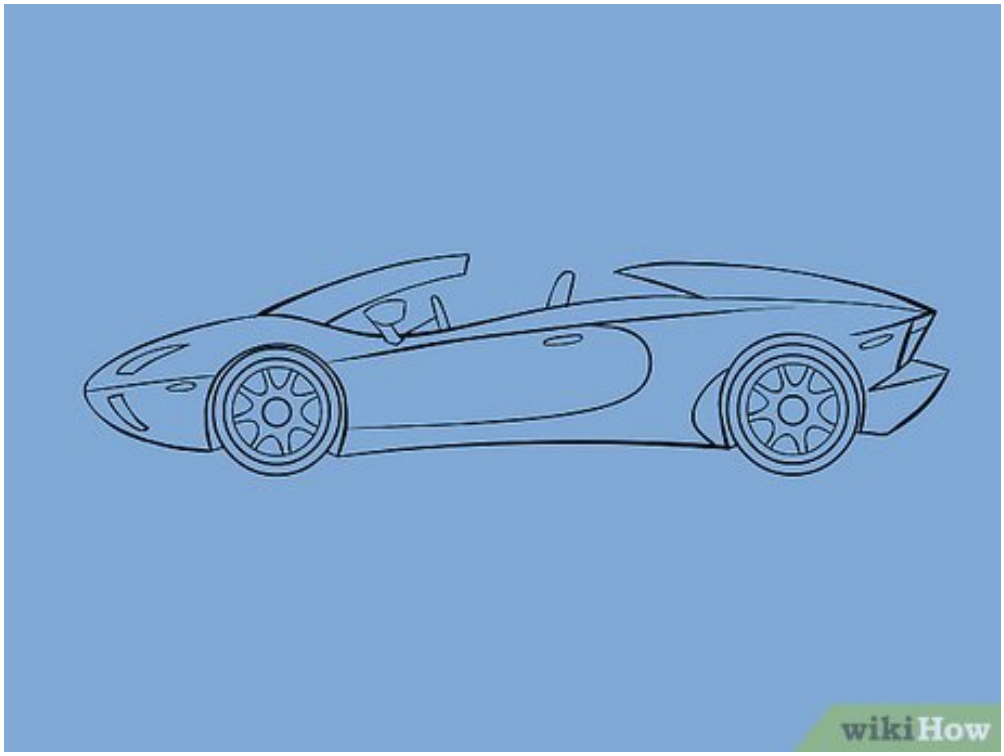
9 From the centre of the wheels create spoke-lines all around.



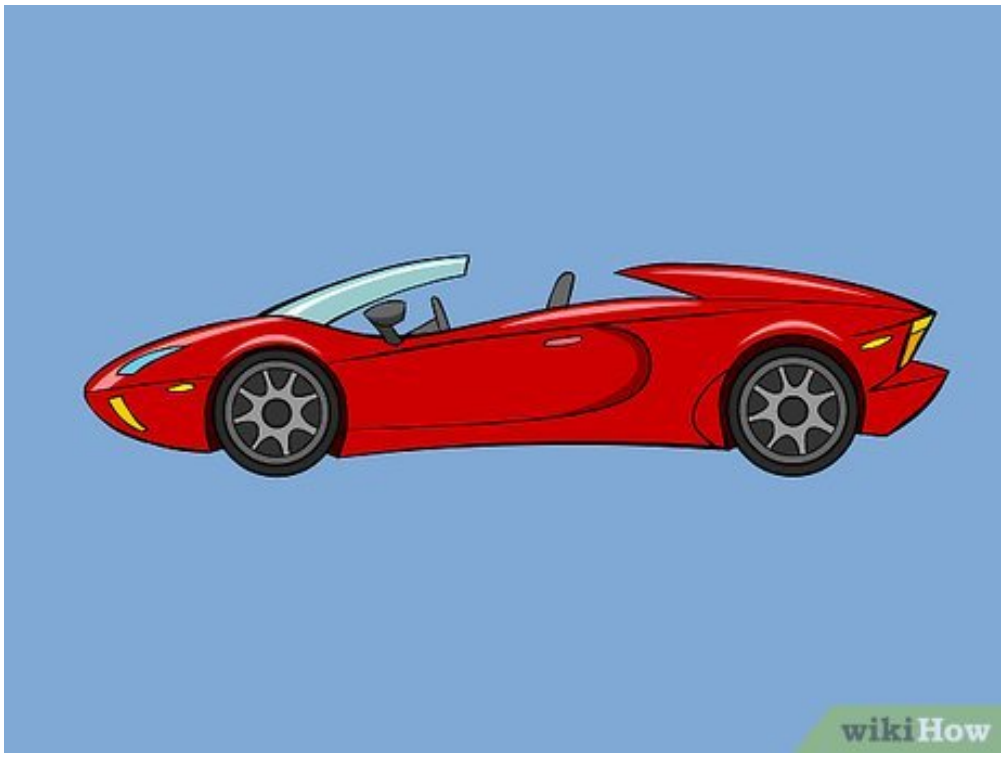
10 Create three lines joining each other at the rear of the car.



11 Draw step by step every line in detail.



12 Erase all guidelines.



13 Color the car.

Method 2 of 4: Starting with Lines

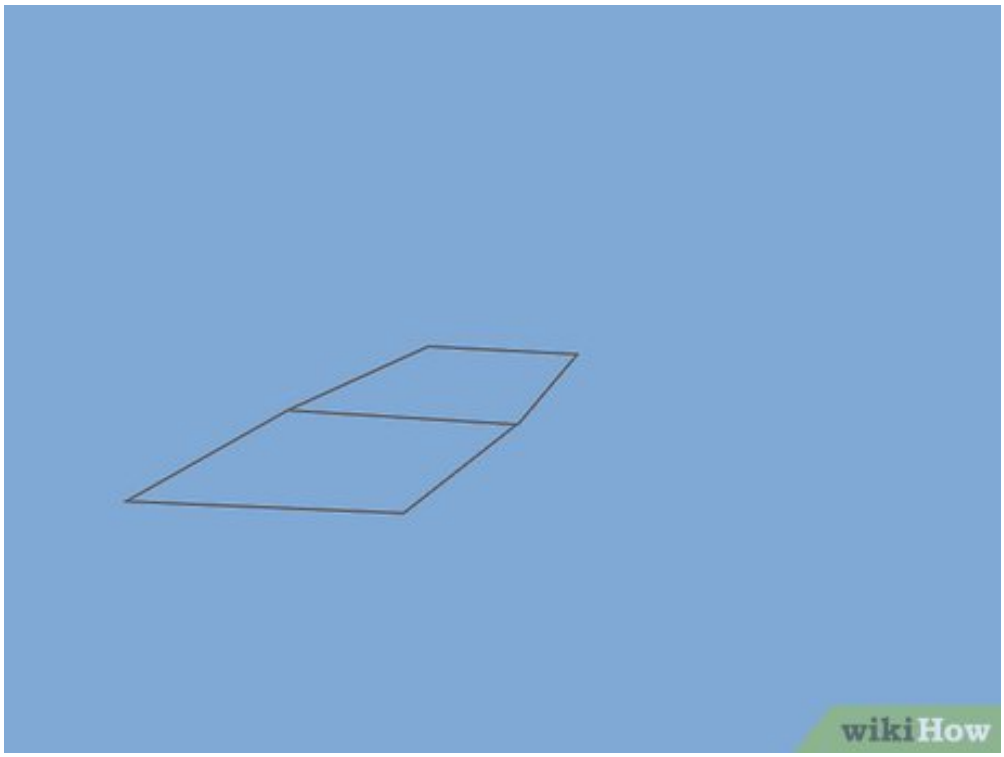
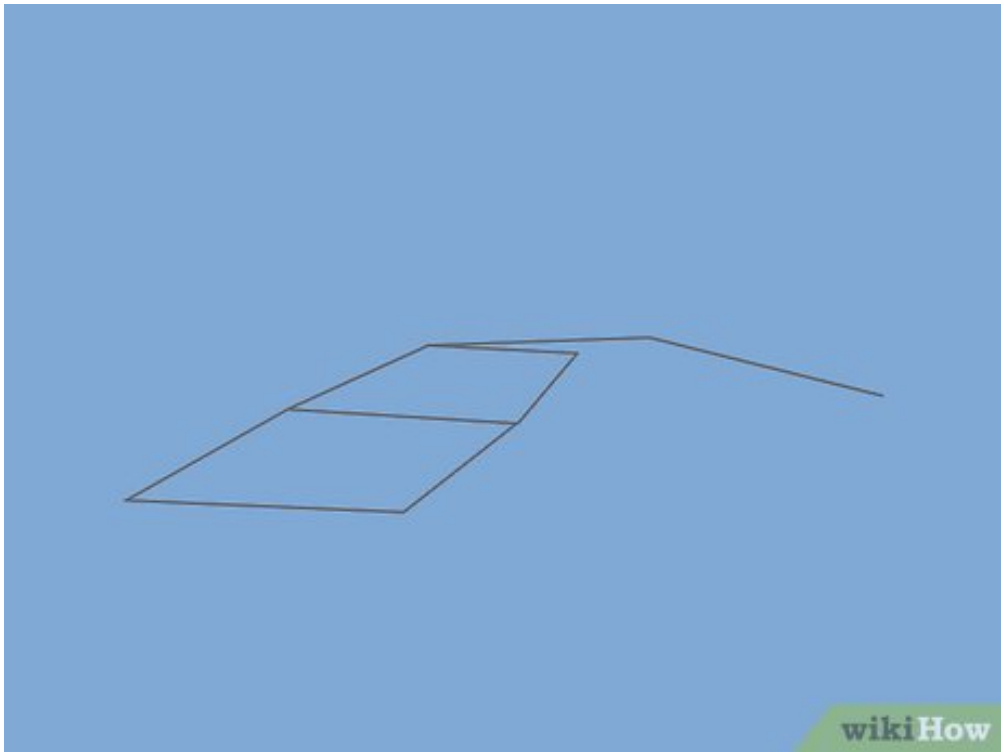
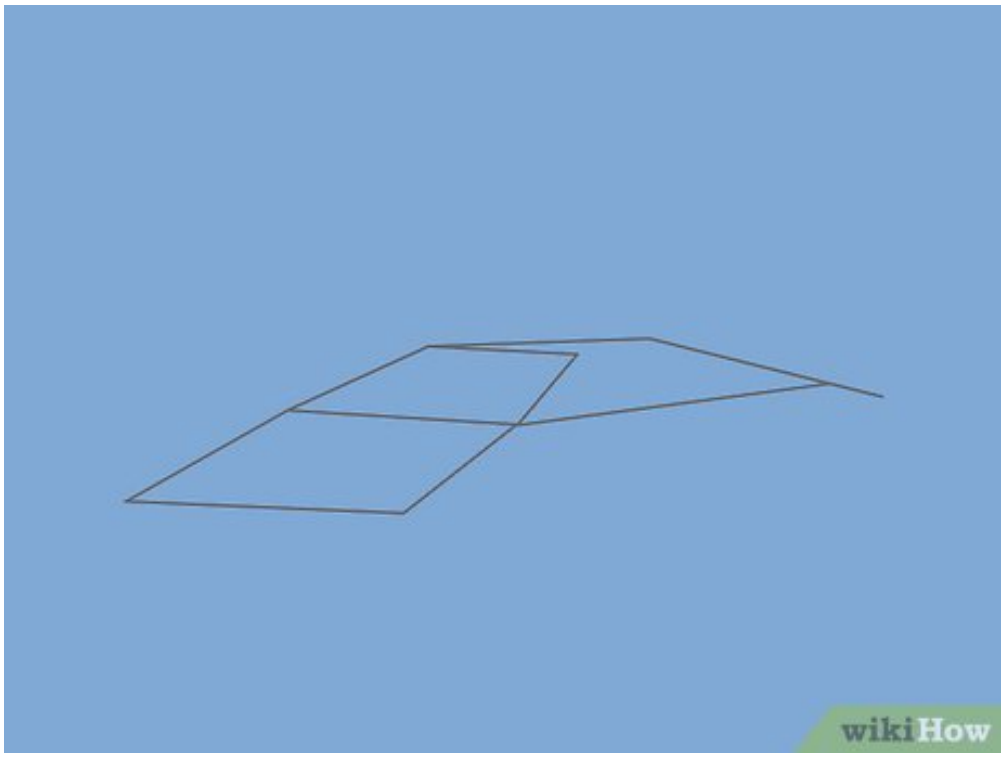
3 Join them with opposite lines to form a slanted box for the bonnet.



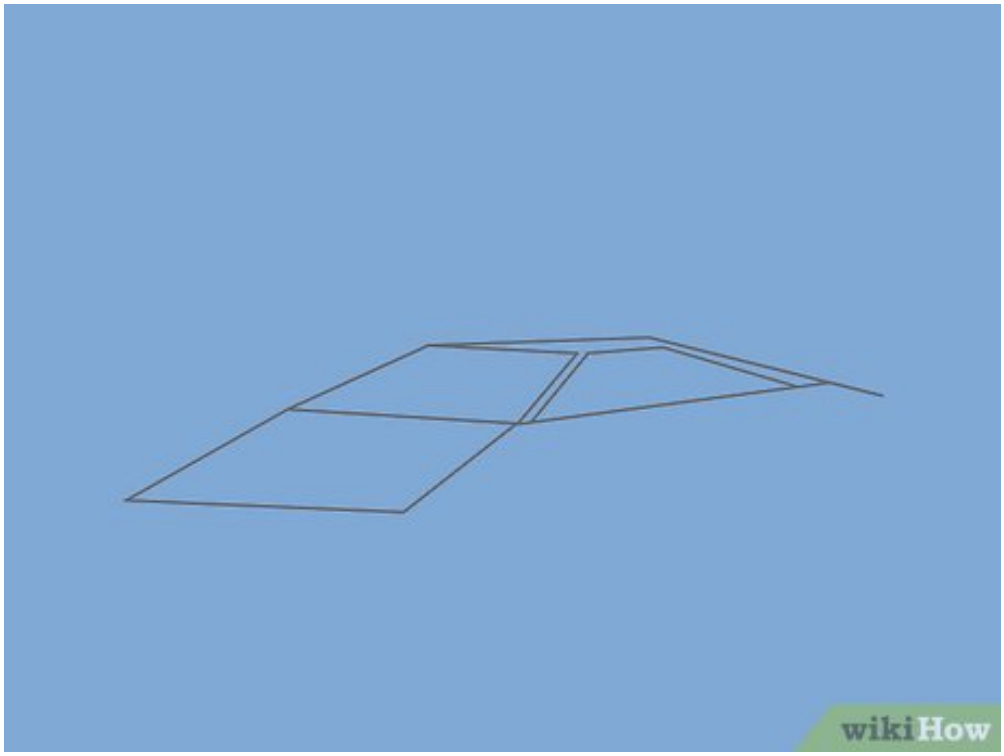
4 Join the box with another one for the guide to the wind screen.



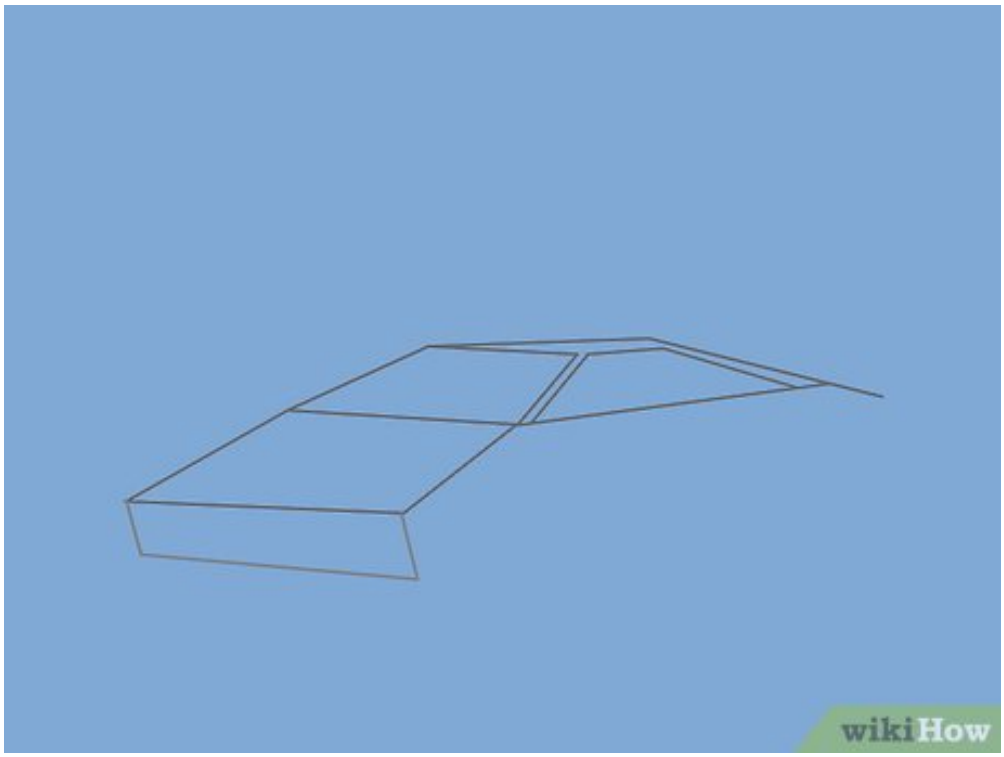
5 Join a couple of lines for the roof and the slanted back of the car.



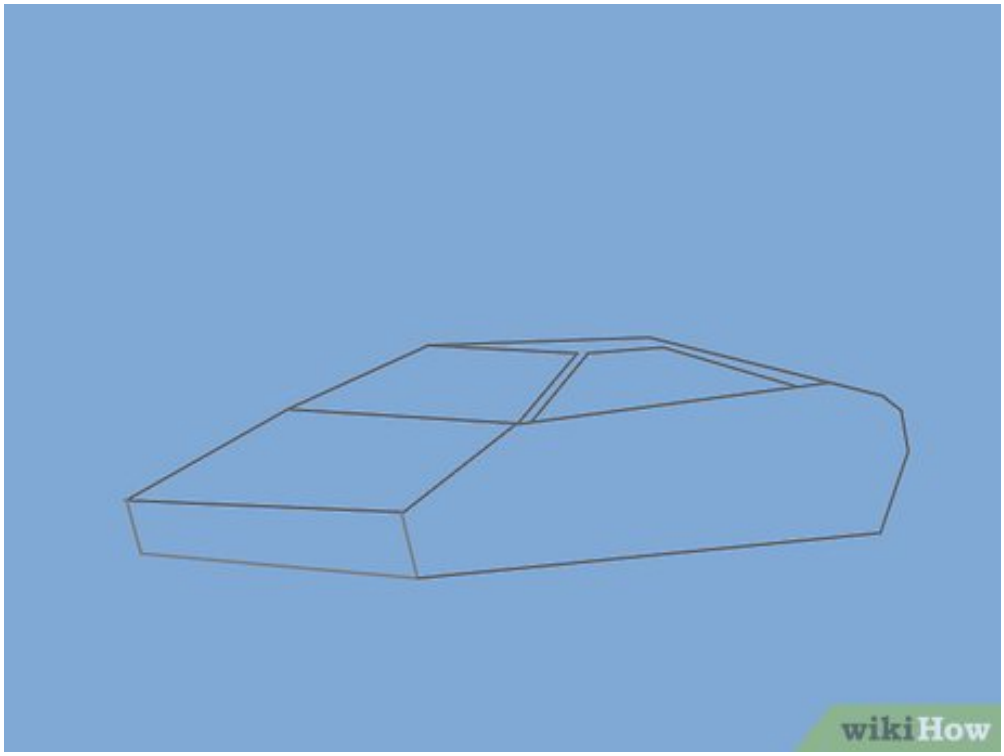
6 Stretch a line across the body of the car from the base of the wind screen.



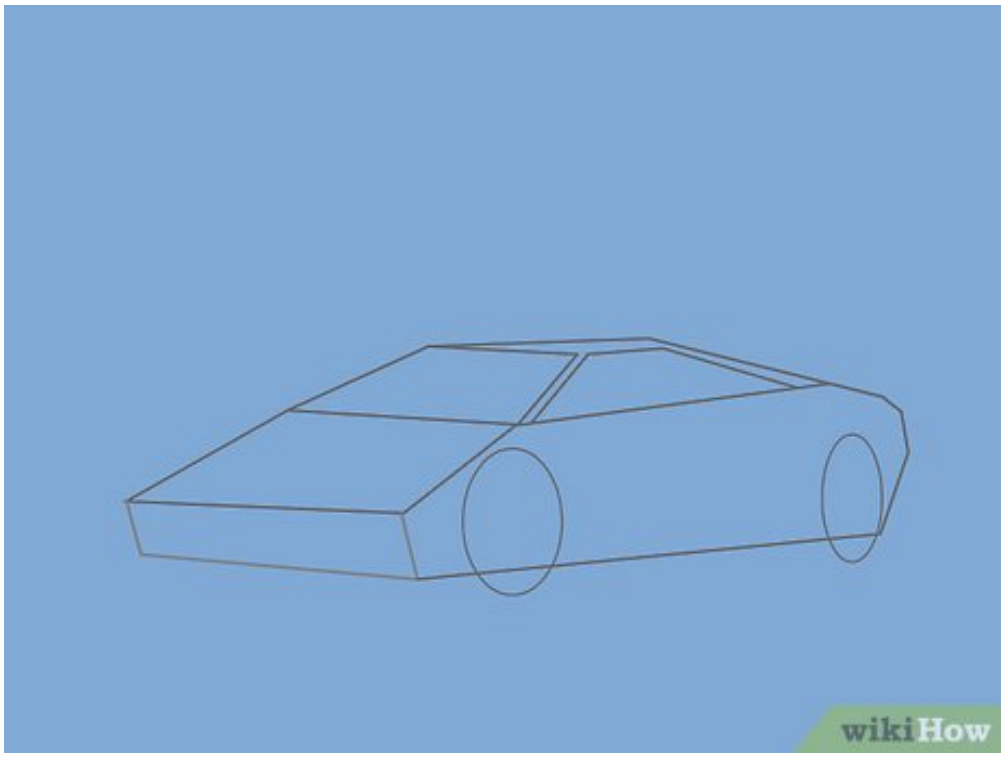
7 Taking the above created line as the base, draw the glass window.



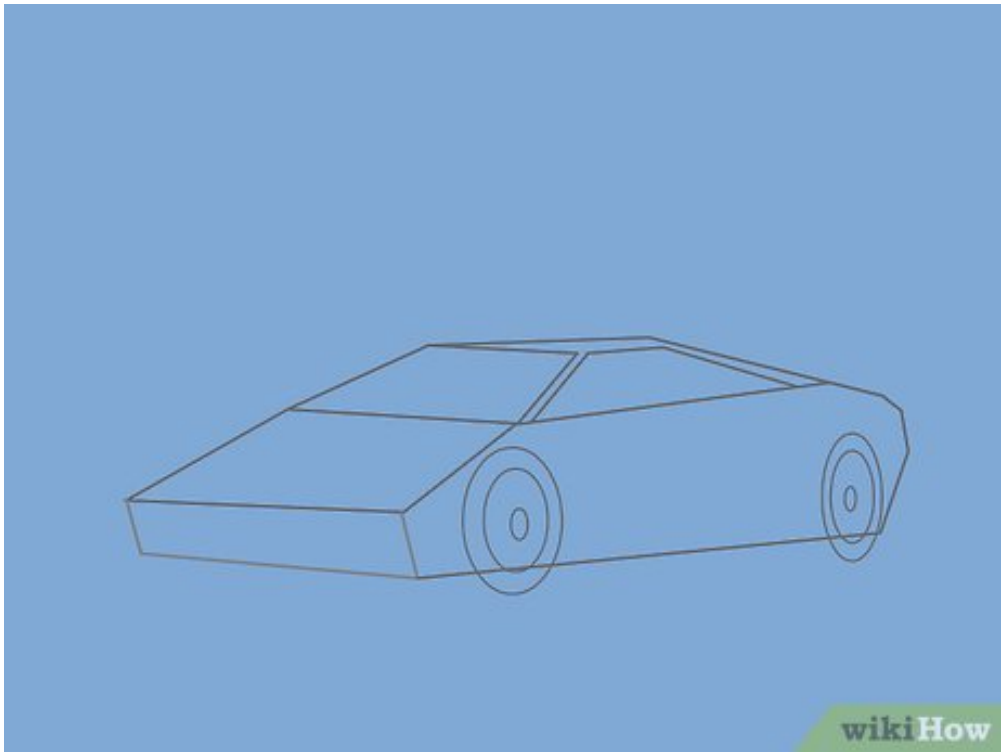
8 Attach a rectangle from the edge of the bonnet.



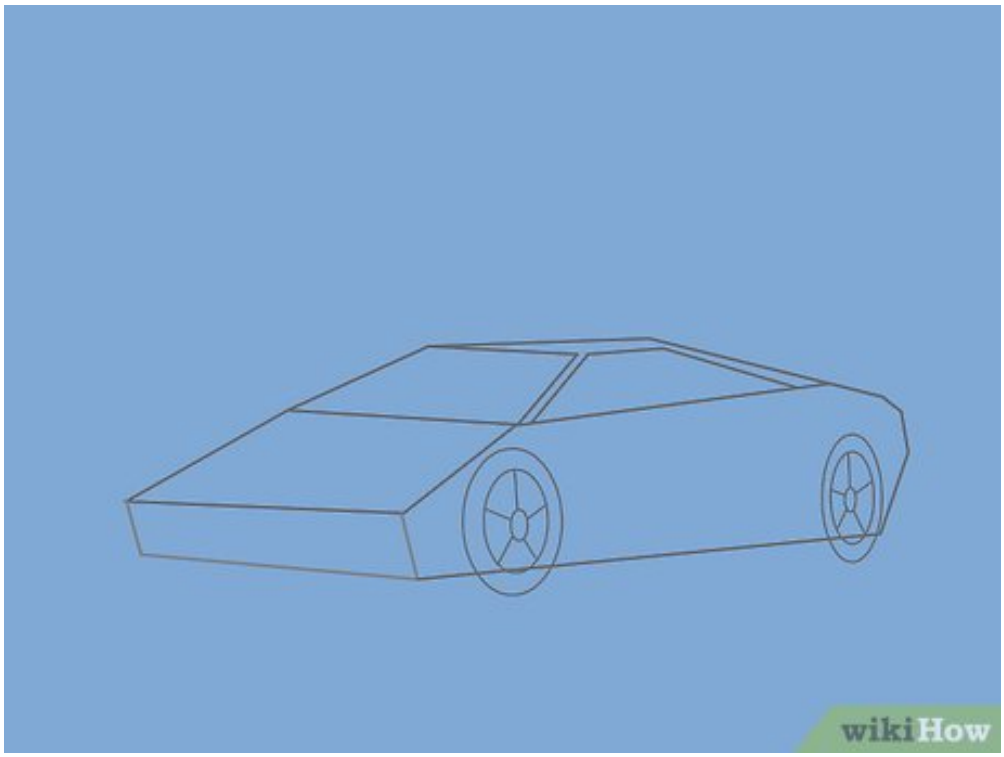
9 Complete the guide to the body of the car.



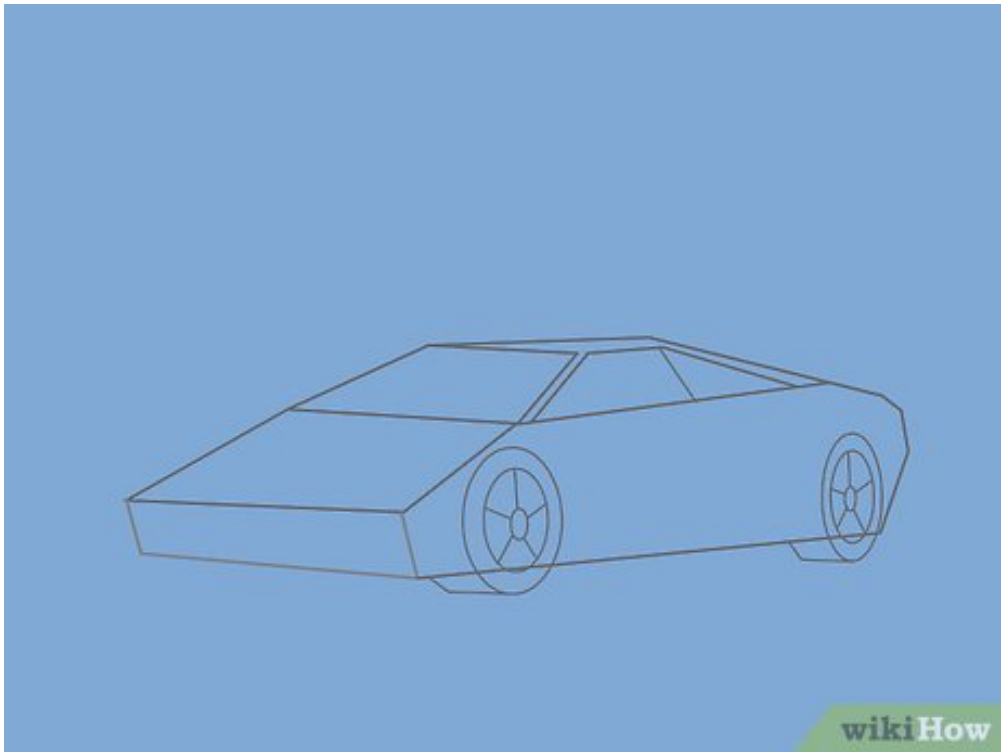
10 Draw ovals for the wheels.



11 Make a couple of further ovals within the wheel outlines.



12 Draw the spoke-guides.



13 Add lines at the bottom of the wheels for the tyre-thickness.

I am a 10 year old and they all look very complicated, so which one would you suggest is the easiest?

Community Answer

I am 10 too! I would use Method 2. Don't worry if you don't get it right the first time! But if it's just too hard for you, then it might be better to practice drawing simpler things for a while, and come back to this another time.
